Seafarers Rights In The Globalized

This bulletin examines in detail the structure of the shipping industry, focusing on problems concerning the working and living conditions of seafarers on board merchant ships serving the global sea transport system. Exploring all levels of maritime policymaking on a global and European level, the author analyses seafarers' rights in the light of international enforcement mechanisms and particularly in the light of the recent ILO Maritime Labour Convention.

Seafarers' access to jurisdictions over labour matters ...

An estimated 90 per cent of world trade passes through maritime or river transport and requires seafarers to operate the ships. Seafarers are therefore essential to international trade and the international economic system. It should be emphasized that maritime transport is the first really globalized sector.

The article aims at analyzing a reference legal instrument for seafarers' rights - the Maritime Labour Convention, 2006. Created due to the lack of relevance of the body of international labour standards in the maritime sector, the Convention lays down in its regulations a firm set of principles and rights for an entire global industry.
